

Webinar Registration Form

The Broken Spoon: Training Tutors To Develop Higher Order Thinking Skills In Students Wednesday, March 6 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

---

This webinar will focus on preparing students to do the thinking required post-graduation. What happens once they begin their new careers? They are “back-to-school,” forced to learn challenging skills and content all over again. If they see thinking as merely superficial, transactional retention of content, they will not be competitive with other professionals who consistently assess and adjust their learning. They will assume they understand something but they do not. They will be afraid to ask questions. They will resolve to “try harder” and “hope for improved performance” because they don’t understand the difference between aspiration and a strategic plan. Teachers and tutors have the power to give our students this value-added skill.

Objectives:

- Explain metacognition and how it relates to self-regulation
- Train others to stimulate metacognition
- Demonstrate metacognition strategies during training
- Assess for growth in metacognitive skills in students and adjust training to improve aggregate results

Who Should Attend?

- Academic Support Directors & Coordinators
- Student Services/Affairs
- Tutor Trainers/Tutors
- Supplemental Instruction
- Peer-led Learning Teams
- Mentor Trainers/Mentors
- Learning Centers
- Any educator interested in learning more about metacognitive skills
